FACTS FOR THE TRAVELLER

Nauru is a tiny island in the South Pacific Ocean. It is 41 kilometres south of the equator and is nearly 4,000 kilometres north-east of Sydney, Australia. It measures 21 square kilometres. When it gained independence in 1968, it became the smallest independent country in the world. Imagine seven New York City Central Parks and put them in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, and you'll have a good idea of its size. Nauru's biggest city is Yaren, but there is no capital city. Industry has destroyed much of the natural beauty of the island. However, there are some good beaches for swimming and there is good diving and fishing around the island. It isn't a good idea to visit Nauru between November and February in the rainy season, when there are often tropical storms.

Around 12,000 people live on the island and the islanders speak Nauruan, a unique Pacific language. English is the official language used for government and business.
