TAKING TIME OFF WORK

0. These days, many students take a gap year before going to university. Now many working people are doing exactly the same. They are choosing to take a break in their careers in order to carry out a range of activities.

1. Many companies will give unpaid holiday for a few months. However, they may not be so happy about longer periods of time. If you are planning to take a year off, make sure your boss can accept your decision and manage your substitution.

2. If you are intending to travel during your time off, make the decision as early as possible so that you have enough money. There's nothing worse than not being able to join in activities because you can't afford them.

3. Look for good deals on airfares. Decide on your route in advance and let people know where you are going. Read about the countries you are going to visit. Don't pack too much! Remember you can buy really cheap clothes abroad.

4. While you're away, don't forget your old friends! You may have a great time and meet a lot of new people, but you'll want to see people when you get home. Phoning can be expensive, but sending postcards is quick and easy. Look for Internet cafés and e-mail friends and family.

5. It's never easy to go back to work after taking time off, so get used to the idea gradually. If you're going back to the same job, visit your workplace for a few hours before you start. If you're applying for a new job, make sure you're qualified enough. Are you up to date with the latest technology and ideas?
